On August 1, 2013, a Treasury Department press release announced the launch of a website providing health care reform information to small business owners. To get started on the website, you input the state of business operations, the number of its full-time employees (including full-time equivalents), and whether health insurance is currently being offered to employees. Links are then provided to information tailored to the business. The website is worth a look, but falls far short of the “one-stop-shop” touted in the press release. You can visit the website here.
