For over 17 years, Jennifer has been defending employers in workers' compensation and employment related claims. She represents and counsels various national clients, including industrial leasing, skilled temporary companies, heavy equipment operators, restaurants, construction companies, foundries, health care facilities, manufacturers, and factories regarding employment and workers' compensation matters. In addition to defending clients in the Common Pleas and Appellate Courts of Ohio and Indiana, she represents employers in front of the Ohio Bureau of Workers' Compensation and Industrial Commission.

Jennifer is routinely a presenter at Ohio Chambers of Commerce meetings and Bureau of Workers' Compensation safety seminars. She also provides seminars for employers, industry trade groups, and third-party administrators across the state. Jennifer has been a presenter at the Ohio BWC Safety Congress since 2015, where she educated attendees on drug testing and other workers' compensation issues.

Jennifer also represents insurance companies in insurance coverage disputes, defends auto and personal injury actions, and defends businesses and employers in product liability, discrimination, construction, employment, contractual, manufacturing, and other disputes.

Jennifer serves on the Board of Directors for Agape for Youth, a non-profit organization in Dayton, Ohio that helps to place foster children with families for both long and short-term care. She is also the Co-Chair of the Workers' Compensation Division of the Dayton Bar Association. She has been named a SuperLawyers Rising Star and/or SuperLawyer since 2012. In 2016, she was named a Top 40 Under 40 by the Dayton Business Journal.
